CONSIDERATIONS REGARDING THE PROCESS OF NEOLITHIZATION
WITHIN THE AREA COMPRISED BETWEEN THE CARPATHIANS

Abstract

The neolithization of the territory situated in the north of the Danube is a result of certain transformations that occurred in the Aegean-Tehssalian societies, concurrently with the beginning of the Protosesklo culture and the first migration process taking place in the Balkans. Presently there are two tendencies in explaining the genesis and the evolution of Balkan-Danubian Neolithic, each of them trying to offer the most comprehensive representation of this phenomenon.

On the one hand the whole period is characterized as having a unitary evolution, in spite of expressing particular aspects which are nothing but the result of an internal evolution and, on the other hand, the Balkan-Danubian Neolithic is being treated as a distinct sequential stage, well-defined from a geographical point of view and marked by massive infiltrations of allogeneous populations.

Résumé

L’article présente les plus importants vestiges archéologiques découverts sur la rive roumaine des Portes de Fer du Danube (le dép. de Mehedinți), une zone aujourd’hui partiellement submergée par les eaux du système hydro énergétique homonyme (fig. 1). Au territoire de la commune de Dubova, dans sept caves et deux refuges ont été découvertes les preuves de la présence humaine, à partir du paléolithique, jusqu’à l’époque romaine (tableau 1). Il y en a aussi à Dubova les traces d’un modeste habitat romain. Des vestiges ont été mises en évidence sur les territoires d’autres localités: Eșelnița (l’époque du bronze, Hallstatt, Latène); Șvinița (un tour d’observation et d’autres traces romains); l’île Ada-Kale (un hypothétique quadrriburgium); Orșova (néolithique, énéolithique, l’âge du bronze, Hallstatt, Latène, l’époque romain). Sur l’ancien territoire d’Orșova, actuellement submergé, au debout du II-ème siècle J.C. a été fondé la ville romaine Dierna, qui a survit jusqu’au début du VII-ème siècle (fig. 3). Pendant le IV-ème siècle, une fortification de type quadrriburgium a fonctionné ici.

Pe parcursul acestui articol ne-am propus o trecere în revistă a principalelor lucrări care au ca subiect Columna lui Traian, dorind să deschidem seria unor investigații, care să ne permită realizarea unei colecții de studii și articole dedicate acestui monument, precum și o analiză a cărților românești și străine care au văzut lumina tiparului.

După o scurtă prezentare a monumentului, am continuat cu descrierea principalelor direcții de cercetare următe de istorici și arheologi. Am acordat atenție unor articole care se referă la lucrări vechi apărute începând cu secolul XVI, dar și încercărilor de aducere a Columnei în atenția mediilor culturale românești din secolul XIX și prima jumătate a secolului XX, în contextul afirmării drepturilor naționale ale românilor în politica europeană a perioadei.

Abstract

In this article we proposed a short description of the main works which subject is the Column of Trajan having the intention to open some investigations, for creating a collection of studies and articles dedicated to this monument and an analysis of the Romanian and foreign books which were printed.

After a short presentation of the monument, continued with the description of the main directions followed by historians and archaeologists. We insisted on some articles which refers on ancient works published starting from XVI century and on essays to bring the Column in the eyes of the Romanian cultural media from the XIX-th century and the first half of the XX-th, in the context of the fight for political and national rights of Romanians in the European political life of the period.

Abstract

The archaeological research from Bucharest-Militari Câmpul Boja showed that there are some settlements from the period of transition from Late Antiquity to the Middle Age. These settlement cover all the surface of the site. There were found 57 contexts of this period: 39 dwellings, 6 pits and 12 outside kitchen kilns.

The archaeological material consists in pottery vessels, small pottery weights, few broches, burned clay and wood. Most of the pottery vessels were hand-made, and a minority was wheel-made. Taking count on the analogies, we consider that some pottery shapes have origins in Dacian, Sarmatian or Sântana de Mureș-Cerneahov Culture, also in the Roman provincial pottery.

We have made some chronological observation that hope to be confirmed by the future research in this and others archaeological sites.

THE IMAGE OF SPAIN IN SOME WALACHIAN AND MOLDAVIAN
CHRONICLES FROM THE 17TH AND 18TH CENTURY

Abstract

There were many chronicles, written by both Walachian and Moldavian historians in the 16th and 17th century, which focused on different information about Spain. Some of them illustrate events integrated in the category of Antique Spain, such as the ones provided by Constantin Cantacuzino, who narrates the moment of the siege of Numancia, in 134 B. D. He also refers to the Romanized Spain and to the Spanish language as a result of this process. Moreover, Constantin Cantacuzino was the possessor of an extremely interesting library, where several Spanish authors were discovered.

The chronicles written by Azarie and Grigore Ureche include details about the reign of Iacob Herculid or Despot Waiwod in Moldavia, the latter being an ex soldier in the army of the Spanish emperor, Charles I. Three important moments in the history of Europe, which also involved Spain, are subsequently exposed: the war of succession for the throne of Spain (described by Ioan Neculce and the Anonym Chronicle of Walachia), the succession for the throne of Austria (presented in Ioan Neculce's Chronicle, but also in the Ghika's Chronicle) and the war of succession for the throne of Poland (illustrated by Ioan Neculce and the same Ghika's Chronicle).

The article focuses on all these topics, debating every problem that is exposed by the historians, taking into account the events as a whole and as a great trace to follow, in order to better understand the life and events of that Age.

The Catholic Church found in the person of Kings Isabel of Castillia and Ferdinand of Aragon, the artisans of the unity of Spain, two efficient personalities for the action of building a Catholic entity able to extend the divine authority over the European states, the Inquisition. If the Inquisition was a General Religious Court, its Spanish division will give the direction and the form of the Catholic extension, even after their death. This article tries to present the influence of the Spanish aspect of Inquisition, which remains after centuries a controversial institutions. The main contribution of the Catholic Kings was that of ensuring to the Pope the most powerful ally in the expansion of his authority in the Europe.

Abstract

The object of the article is the destiny of the fortune accumulated before 1821 in Cerneți, the former residence of the Mehedinți County, by Tudor Vladimirescu, leader of the Romanian National Revolution from 1821.

Tudor Vladimirescu had in Cerneți houses, in the city, a mill in the middle of the field, a house with wine cellar, a wall house – cula – and 30 acres vineyard.

After his tragical death, happened in 1821, these properties have been asserted by so-called creditors, without having the papers to prove aut.

That's why at the end of the 4th decade of the 19th century, the Tudor's fortune in the absence of his successors, was sold through auction, its destiny been as ungrateful as the destiny of its owner.

Abstract

The present study aims at rendering evident a number of internal and external factors instrumental in the issuance and enforcement of the Organic Statute of Wallachia.

The legitimate need of modernisation in the setup of institutions (a thought to be found in the programme of the 1821 Revolution), as well as the evolution of the Romanian legal norm, doubled by political and reformist actions on the part of low or high-ranking boyars, in a climate of pressure exerted by the Great Powers, are key prerequisites echoing developments in Romanian contemporary society. These factory may fall under the category of „revolution and reform” on an indigenous territory.

The entirety of aspects are scrutinised against the background of a specific international context, in heed of the political and legal status of Wallachia as set forth in the Adrianople Treaty, her positioning on the East-West Axis, under consideration of joint efforts accros the whole of Europe on the part of the Great Powers.

Abstract

The present study tries to present some documentary testimonies concerning the activities made for the modernization of the Romanian society in the complex European process of modernization and reformation of the economical, social and political structures. On the basis of some diplomatically reports of the period, is represented, in the main instance, the way in which the ideas and the objectives of the Revolution from 1848 were received in the Romanian Principalities.

The same documents reveal the attitude of the European public opinion on the Act of Union from 1859. The most important part is represented by the reforms made during the reign of Alexandru Ioan Cuza, appreciated in a special way by the European diplomacy, for opening new perspectives in the evolution of the Romanian society.

De toujours, le territoire de la Roumanie, a représenté un espace favorable du développement de la vie économique. La circulation de la monnaie, par exemple, représente des liaisons d'entre les participants à la division du travail.

La monnaie a évolué, en souffrant des nombreux métamorphoses, jusqu'à l'apparition d'un système bancaire et des institutions afférentes. La Banque Nationale de la Roumanie, de 1880, conduit la politique monnaitaire et permit les émission des bancnotes et de la monnaie divisionnaire aussi, y compris les réformes monnetaires.

L'entrée de la Roumanie dans les structures de l'Union Européenne a nécessité des changements de substance, législatives, organisatoriques et administratives et dans le domaine financier, dans le même temps.

The article presents an interesting subject to Romania's economical development in general and of Oltenia in particular. Based on rich information, edited and inedited, a real and precise image of the industrial development of Oltenia area is created, until the year when the main production means were nationalized (1948).

At the beginning of the 20th century, Oltenia was an area with a poor development form the industrial point of view, having only 81 factories. After the First World War, the industry in Oltenia registered a slow and discontinuous growth. As a consequence of Law 119/1948, in Oltenia were nationalized 522 factories, from which 256 were in Dolj county, 13 in Gorj county, 73 in Mehedinți county, 160 in Romanati county and 50 in Valcea county.

REGARDING ARTICLE 4 OF THE MISSIR LAW (1902)

Abstract

The following article represents the Missir Law from February 1902 and its impact upon the Jews from Romania. The Missir Law was also called the law of the tradesmen. Basile M. Missir was the Minister of Agriculture and of Public Properties at that time. The law was adopted by the National Liberal Party party in order to bring the Romanian tradesmen into its interest. Article 4 from the law stipulated that the foreigners from Romania must certify that Romanians had also similar rights in their country. This was, of course, impossible for the Jews to prove because they had no country and they couldn't provide similar rights to Romanian tradesmen. This must be linked to the fact that after the Congress of Berlin in 1878, where Romania gained its Independence, the Jews from Romania were still considered foreigners according to article 7 from the Constitution. After the Congress the Romanian Government modified the article 7 from the Constitution and Jews from Romania were able to obtain citizenship but only in an individual way and under some conditions. Mass citizenship was obtained for the Jews only after the First World War in 1919. Attached to the article, there are three press articles from Vienna dating 1902, translated into Romanian, describing the condition of the Jewish tradesmen in particular and of the Jewish population in general following the new Missir law. The Missir law was modified in 1912.

ROMANIA AND THE AMBASSADORS' CONFERENCE IN LONDON
(DECEMBER 1912 – AUGUST 1913)

Abstract

In November 1912, the European Powers decided to assemble an international conference on the political crisis and the Balkan war. The event took place under special circumstances in London. Neither the agenda nor the meeting days had been pre-established. Difficulties were met and the workings lasted until August 1913. Romania's participation represented one of the priorities of the Romanian diplomacy. Romania pleaded for the neutrality during the Balkan war and the defence of the Aromanians' legitimate rights in order to be admitted to the ambassadors' conference unconditionally. Without being able to take part to Saint James Palace conference, where the Balkan belligerent parts negotiated the peace offering with the Ottoman Empire, Romania expressed its wish to participate in the reunion of the European powers. In spite of the support offered by Germany and the Triple Alliance, the Romanian diplomacy met the opposition of France. According to Poincaré's instructions to Paul Cambon, the ambassador in London, France and the representatives of the Triple Entente were afraid that the presence of the Romanian diplomat would strengthen the position of Austria-Hungary and lead to similar demands from the part of the other Balkan states. Eventually, the Romanian delegation took part in the conference, playing an advisory role. Nicolae Mișu gave voice to Romania's demands in connection with the Aromanians in the Pind Mountains region at Edward Grey's call during the meeting on March, 26th 1913. The event bore historical significance. Romania attempted at breaking through the international politics in round-about ways. In the guise of the Aromanians' fate in the Balkan Peninsula, the Romanian government suggested the readjustment of Romania's political role at the European level throughout its short history as an independent and sovereign state.

In the entire interbelic period, Romania showed a great attention to the political, economic and military relations with Great Britain. Political and diplomatic personalities such as Nicolae Titulescu, Ion Antonescu, V.V. Tilea, Radu Rosetti, Nicolae Rădescu, Constantin Sănătescu and others contributed to these relations.

On the basis of the general strategy, Romania was important to Great Britain because of its nearness to the Bosporus and Dardanelles Straits, and also to the oriental Mediterranean basin, and so, in case of a high-range European conflict, it represented an indubitable strategic value. Taking into consideration these realities, at the beginning of 1930 the proposal of building a naval base on the Black Sea coast was advanced. After many discussions, the British Admiralty agreed to the fact that this base should be built on the Taşaul Lake, because the project "answers to matters of great interest to Europe's safety".

En cinq semaines, la France allait connaître la plus grande défaite militaire de toute son histoire. La Wehrmacht, au moment de l'armistice (le 22 Juin 1940), occupait plus de la moitié du territoire national, jusqu'à la frontière espagnole.

En juin 1940, le gouvernement du Maréchal Philippe Pétain avait réussi à préserver les colonies françaises de l'occupation germano-italienne et à conserver la totalité de la flotte, qui fut cependant désarmée.

L'entrevue Hitler-Pétain à Montoire (24 Octobre 1940) engagea la France dans la politique de collaboration. Le Gouvernement de Vichy prétendit mener une politique de double jeu, en accordant aux Allemands des satisfactions morales ou verbales et quelques avantages matériels, tout en sauvegardant l'Empire et en préparant le redressement du pays.

Les Allemands occupèrent la zone du Sud (le 11 Novembre 1942) et s'assurèrent des bases en Tunisie. Le Gouvernement de Vichy perdit progressivement toute emprise sur l'Empire.

Faptul de a te regăsi expulzat din propria țară, fără posibilitate de înapoiere și de a continua să trăiești acasă, se poate dovedi – dincolo de tot ceea ce interdicția de întoarcere poate însemna ca tragedie pentru orice ființă umană – o experiență umană fondatoare, un nou început în parcursul social al individului și, prin aceasta, o excelentă „școală”, datorită căreia acesta dobândește o viziune mai largă a problemelor și se „deprovincializează”. Jurnalul de exil al lui Leontin Jean Constantiniu este tocmai mărturia unui astfel de parcurs identitar.

Résumé

Le fait de se retrouver expulsé hors de sa patrie, sans possibilité de rentrer chez-soi et de continuer à y vivre, peut se révéler – au-delà de tout ce que le bannissement implique de tragique dans la vie de tout être humain – une expérience humaine fondatrice, un nouveau commencement dans le parcours social de l’individu et par là, une excellente «école», grâce à laquelle celui-ci acquiert une vision plus large des problèmes et se «déprovincialise». Le journal d’exil de Leontin Jean Constantinescu témoigne précisément d’un tel parcours identitaire.

CONTEXTUL INTERNAȚIONAL AL SCHIMBĂRILOR RADICALE DIN
ROMÂNIA ÎN ANUL 1989. CÂTEVA CONSIDERAȚII

Rezumat

Articolul insistă pe contextul internațional – în principal european – în care au fost înlăturate regimurile comuniste din țările europene ale aşa-numitului lagăr socialist, în anii 1989-1990.

Sunt evaluate cauzele și consecințele acestui fenomen intrat în istoriografie sub denumirea de revoluție, aşa cum rezultă din abordări ale unor istorici și politologi din fostele țări comuniste dar și din occident. Este evidențiată varietatea și specificitatea modalităților în care s-a realizat înlăturarea regimurilor totalitare și tranziția de la sistemul communist la democrație, de la țară la țară. Cea mai mare parte din articol este rezervată realităților românești din timpul revoluției din decembrie 1989.

ROMANIA AND THE INTERNATIONAL CIRCUMSTANCES OF THE CHANGES IN 1989. SEVERAL CONSIDERATIONS

Abstract

The article insists on the international circumstances /mainly European/ when the communist regimes have been discarded in the European states of the so-called socialist compound, in 1989-1990.

The causes and effects of this phenomenon are being analysed, a phenomenon which has entered the historiography studies as “revolution”, thus resulting from historians’ and politic scholars’ researches both of the former communist countries and from those of the western states. The variety and specifics of the ways by which every country has overthrown the totalitarian regimes and transitioned to democracy are being emphasised, from country to country. The majority of the article is about the realities of the Romanian society during the Revolution of December 1989.

Rezumat

Articolul analizează apariția sistemelor de partide în România post-comunistă, apreciind ca fiind imposibilă aplicarea bazelor teoretice ale clivajelor (modelul Lipset-Rokkan) acestei țări. În consecință, evoluția istorică a societății post-comuniste și mișcările strategice ale actorilor politici pe parcursul democratizării au fost adesea percepute ca „momente așteptate necircumscrise niciunui model teoretic”. Contraștării observației, apreciez că orice clivaj, chiar și în faza incipientă, sugerează cel puțin două întrebări cu privire la construcția ideologică și stabilitatea sistemului de partide. Propun, de asemenea, o conexiune între modelul Lipset-Rokkan și teoriile lui Kitschelt, Deegan-Krause și Crowther. Articolul debutează cu o prezentare generală a tendințelor dezvoltării generale a sistemului de partide din România. Scopul său este de a prezenta cele trei mari clivaje folosind ca punct de plecare reflecțiile lui Lewis privitoare la partidele postcomuniste.

POLITICAL CLEAVAGES IN ROMANIA. A THEORETICAL OVERVIEW OF THE POST-COMMUNIST PARTIES AND PARTY SYSTEMS

Abstract

This article examines the emergence of parties in post-communist Romania concluding that the theoretical basis of cleavages (the Lipset-Rokkanian model) is almost impossible to apply in this country. Accordingly, the historical evolution of the post-communist society and the strategic moves of political actors during democratization were often perceived as an “expected moments lacking any theoretical model”. Contrary to this assumption, I argue that even an incipient cleavage suggests at least two questions about the significance of an ideological framework and a stable party system. I also propose a linkage between Lipset-Rokkan’s model and Kitschelt’s, Deegan-Krause’s and Crowther’s theories. The article begins with an overview of general trends of development of political parties in Romania. A general development of Romanian party system tendencies. Its aim is to present the three main political cleavages using as a starting point for discussion Lewis’s reflection regarding post-communist parties.

ROMAN HOLIDAYS AND THEIR PERMANENCE IN THE ROMANIAN POPULAR CALENDAR

Abstract

Universal mythological research has as a common reference the mythic chronology. This supposes that within the corpus of rites, of mythic characters there should be historical reference points, a primary background for their anecdotic.

We propose a comparative perspective of the calendar with fixed and mobile holidays and with Roman divinities as it was conceived by Atanasie Marian Marienescu and of the Romanian popular calendar, reconstituted by us on the basis of field research during 20 years. This „mirroring” is surprising.

The distance in time between the holidays invoked in the Roman calendar and in the Romanian popular calendar (functional today), as well as the different background (mythological stratum and substratum) could be arguments for accidental resemblances between ritual sequences, beliefs, Roman customs and Romanian present-day traditions within the framework of holidays during the year. We plead for the irradiation in time and space (diachronically and geographically) of a common background of humanity out of which there are claimed the sources of the substratum of Roman mythology and the sources of the stratum pertaining to the Romanian mythology.

Abstract

The study Educational conceptions and institutions in the Christian Medieval Age is based on presenting this period's educational principles, pedagogic conceptions and institutional environment's characteristics. The description of the specific cultural and educational aspects is accompanied by the idea system's explanation, by referring to the historical context, to the obvious rupture and to some aspects which are common to the Antiquity's educational values, and by the emphasis of the Christian pedagogy's influences on the evolutions of the educational paradigms and conceptions of the following historical periods.

The XV-th century represents for the Romanian Principalities “the age of crusade”, in which great personalities as Iancu de Hunedoara, Vlad Țepeș și Ștefan cel Mare transformed their states in a political wall against the Ottoman expansion over the Europe, which became undestructible after the fall of the Byzantine Empire in 1453. The article points out the main aspects of this struggle as they appear in the Romanian historiography.

Abstract

Localised in the south-west of Romania, the Moldova Nouă area includes the most biggest part from south of Caraș-Severin county; limited at north by Locva Mountains chain and at south by the left bank of Danube, the analysed zone is part of depression bassinet which stretches between Baziaș and Coronini.

The presence of coppery pyrite deposits and those of banatite favored the early development of the mining exploitations. The study has as purpose the presentation of the evolution of the mining industry, the consequences of this economical activity on the environment and the measures of ecological rehabilitation of the mining sites.

Abstract

The paper deals with the assessment of Craiova urban space and functional zones development during the last five hundred years. The study is based on the analysis of the historical documents that include both written information and maps regarding the primordial urban structures such as main roadways, housing and markets. There is good correlation between the main stages of territorial development and new sketched functional areas of the city, as well as the emergence of the road system network. The main goal of the paper refers to the cartographic representation and scientific description of the territorial dispersion and functional zoning of Craiova urban area.

Abstract

The way of unity of Romania and Italy was almost common during the period from 1859 to 1866. Beside the official attempts to impose their political unity, in Romania and in Italy, with help from Emperor Napoleon III of France, plans of a common revolution against Austria will be also made, because Romania had major interests in Transylvania and Bukovina as Italy had in Venice. The Emperor had another plan: an exchange with Austria which would cease Venice in exchange of annexing the United Principalities. Strongly desired by Italians, this alternative failed because of the opposition of Austria, Great Britain and Romanians who accused Austria of the persecution of their brethren from Transylvania.

THE DELIMITATION OF THE DOBROUDJA SOUTH BORDER (1878-1881)

Abstract

After the Peace Congress of Berlin (1878), serious differences occur as regards the delimitation of the south border of the autonomous Principality of Bulgaria. According to art. 2 of the Treaty of Berlin (1/13 July 1878), the town Silistra was awarded to Bulgaria, which produce national discontent at Bucharest, the more so as this town have a great strategic importance. Commission for delimitation of the border, whose works were opened on 11 October 1878, will determine to award Silistra and a fortified point, known as the Arab-Tabia, to Romania, solution bitterly contested by the Russian representative for almost a year. Arab Tabia was occupied by Romanian troops which would lead to serious tensions between Romania and Russia. There is even the possibility of an outbreak of military conflict between the two sides. After lengthy debates and controversies, the Commission established, again, mostly as a border of southern Dobrogea to pass east of Silistra, and including Arab-Tabia, but Romania lost a strip of territory of 4-5 km<sup>2</sup>, which make impracticable the idea of the Romanian authorities to build in this area a bridge over the Danube. New frontier will be recognized by the Ottoman Empire until July 1881.

THE ROMANIAN GENERAL EXPOSITION FROM 1906

Abstract

The author is focussing its attention on one of the major cultural and national events organised in Romania, in the beginning of the 20th century, the Romanian General Exposition from 1906.

The Exposition was organised in order to celebrate 40 years of King's Carol I of Romania Reign.

The Event was an opportunity for the different national and local organisations and institutions to have a large participation as well as for remarkable cultural and scientific personalities of the epoch.

The cultural and the museum's values gathered in the purpose of organising the Exposition were exposed in the Art Palace specially built-up with this destination in the Carol Park which was also inaugurated, in the same context, on the Filaret Hill from Bucharest.

Rezumat

Sunt autori care consideră că manifestările globalizării există încă de la începutul istoriei și s-au resimțit mai mult sau mai puțin de-a lungul timpului, până în momentul în care au cunoscut o dezvoltare accentuată. Alți autori consideră că fenomenul globalizării este contemporan, actual, fondat pe principiile modernizării și dezvoltării capitalismului și care, de-a lungul ultimelor decenii, a cunoscut o dezvoltare accentuată. Un al treilea punct de vedere prezintă globalizarea ca un proces recent, care este puternic legat de post-industrialism.

DU PROCESSUS DE GLOBALISATION
Résumé

Il y a des auteurs qui considèrent que des manifestations de la globalisation existent depuis le commencement de l'histoire, et celles-ci se sont ressentis moins ou plus pendant le temps, jusqu'au moment où ils ont connu un développement accentué. D'autres auteurs considèrent que le phénomène de la globalisation est contemporain, actuel, fondé sur les principes de la modernisation et du développement du capitalisme, et qui, pendant les derniers décennies, a connu un développement accentué. Un troisième point de vue représente la globalisation comme un processus récent, qui est fortement lié au post-industrialisme.
